

October 24, 1975

Mr. Kenneth S. Templeton, Jr.
Institute for Humane Studies
1177 University Drive
Menlo Park, California 94025

Dear Ken:

Thanks for your response on keeping in print LIBERTY: A PATH TO ITS RECOVERY. George Pearson phoned on another matter this morning and we also discussed the LIBERTY book. So, he'll doubtless be talking with you next week. I've just rechecked our stock and found some copies in the attic -- so we have about 250 of the cloth edition on hand.

In view of our limited sales, I'm not sure we should attempt a new paperback printing -- especially if you might have all or the most of it included in one of the memorial volumes in prospect. Chapter 13 on "The Extent of Lost Liberty" is quite out of date and probably should have a footnote at the end to cover the retrogression since 1949. And there should be a new page about the author. Our file copy shows some typos that should be corrected.

page 13 - align the bottom line
page 16 - 23rd line "has been", instead of "to be"
page 119 - 10th line, Quote marks before "You parasitize..."
page 133, -77th line "whoever," instead of "whomever" page 143 - 24th line "though," instead of "thought"
page 147 - last line "citizens," instead of "citizen"
page 150 - 6th line insert "of" after "cost"

These are not major changes, of course, but do involve more than simply photographing and running off new copies.

So, I'll welcome the results of any further thoughts after you've talked with George. Meanwhile, I'll try to get a figure on the cost of doing 2,000 to 3,000 new paperbacks.

Kenneth S. Templeton, Jr.

-2-

October 24, 1975

I'm enjoying PROPERTY IN A HUMANE ECONOMY -- the book, not the reality.

Thanks again and best regards.

Sincerely,

Paul L. Poirot

PLP/dr

Bluid CC - Sowers