Dear Mr. Read:

I wish that I had written "Show Me Any Other Country..." Betty Knowles Hunt has set forth clearly, simply, and convincingly the ideas which businessmen should be expressing every day. The piece is alive, and I want to help increase its distribution.

From my vantage point as a retired businessman, it seems to me that every house organ which goes to employees and/or stockholders might advantageously reproduce "Show Me Any Other Country..." Were I still at the head of an industrial group I would also feel a definite obligation to distribute this type of message by direct mail to both employees and stockholders — as a good-will builder — and to convey the fact that it behooves us to work together in the defense of our incomparable heritage.

"Show Me Any Other Country..." is good. Please let me know what I can do to give it the audience it deserves.

Sincerely yours,

H. B. EARHART
