"This is the tragedy of our age; public opinion demands economic legislation that is destroying employment opportunities, consuming productive capital, stifling creative effort, and eroding the value of our savings through inflation. The weakest members of society are rendered unemployable through minimum wage legislation and other social regulation that price untrained and unskilled labor right out of the market. Thus rendered unemployable, numerous welfare programs must support an ever growing number of Americans on relief. Social and economic problems breed and compound racial problems that are tearing at the roots of American society. . . .

"The moral destruction of millions of good Americans far surpasses in tragic significance the economic loss. Youth is walking the streets in idleness, uselessness, and revolt. Their despair and agony are fertile breeding grounds for the political and economic radicalism that characterizes our age. . . .

"The United States is the last bastion of Western freedom and civilization. If it fails under the onslaught of international communism or internal statism, civilization must perish."

HANS SENNHOLZ is Professor of Economics and Chairman of the Economics Department at Grove City College in Pennsylvania. He received his early education in Germany, his M.A. from Marburg University, his Ph.D. in Political Science from Cologne University, and his Ph.D. in Economics from New York University.

Dr. Sennholz is a popular lecturer to educational and professional audiences throughout the country. In more than 100 public lectures per year he presents the case for individual freedom and the private property order. In some 300 published essays and articles he has discussed nearly every aspect of the current trend toward political power and control. And in order to make the great writings of Austrian economists available in the English language he translated six books by Eugen von Böhm-Bawerk and Ludwig von Mises.

At the present, Dr. Sennholz serves as trustee of The Foundation for Economic Education, director of the Committee for Monetary Research and Education, and director of Multinational Investments, Inc., in Cleveland, Ohio.

He wrote or co-authored the following books:

HOW CAN EUROPE SURVIVE?

ON FREEDOM AND FREE ENTERPRISE

GOLD IS MONEY

DEATH AND TAXES

AGE OF INFLATION
