

You can't vote yourself security —you earn it

LET'S be honest with ourselves — in this troubled world there is no such thing as security any more. (Even the dictionary says the definition of Secure as "Confident" is "archaic".)

You eat and wear and are sheltered by what you have produced. Therefore, the more you produce (and don't squander) the more you can save, and the more secure you are.

Everything within reason which makes it impossible for you and me to save should be corrected. And that includes unions who restrict production and therefore workers' savings, governments who waste and therefore tax away savings, businessmen who refuse their workers the means of better production and therefore greater savings.

There will always be some indigent sick or old who cannot produce; they must be taken care of by the rest of us, of course. But that is charity, which is right, not security which is not a right but is our own individual doing, earned by hard work.
