

“FEE

needs no support from me.” Not often, to be sure, but now and then, friends of ours seem surprised to learn that FEE is essentially a hand-to-mouth operation, not endowed, but dependent on current donations to keep right-side-up financially.

“But, you have never asked me for money! I give plenty to organizations I think less of than FEE.”

So general is the practice of importuning for funds that when an institution desists – as does FEE – the impression gets abroad that it has no use for funds. Be that as it may, we insist on living by the freedom-of-choice philosophy we espouse and, thus, will continue to cut back or expand our educational activities as donor-initiated funds decline or rise. You do the choosing!
