

CONFERENCE SPEAKERS

Robert James Bidinotto, whose 3-part series on "Crime and Consequences" appeared in the July, August, and September 1989 issues of The Freeman, is a Staff Writer for Reader's Digest and a journalist and lecturer who specializes in cultural and political issues.

He is the author of "Getting Away With Murder" in the July 1988 Reader's Digest, which, during the 1988 Presidential election campaign, stirred a national controversy about crime and the Massachusetts prison furlough program. Many observers credit this article with affecting the outcome of the Presidential race.

Mr. Bidinotto's many articles, essays, book and film reviews have appeared in Reader's Digest, Success, The Boston Herald, The American Spectator, The Intellectual Activist, Reason, and other publications. He is also a frequent public speaker and talk show guest.

M. Stanton Evans is a syndicated columnist for the Los Angeles Times syndicate and a commentator for the CBS radio network. A former editor of the Indianapolis News (1960-1974), Mr. Evans has served as an assistant editor of The Freeman (in the mid-50s), as managing editor of Human Events, and is currently a contributing editor and regular columnist for that publication. He also writes regularly on legislative matters and on current books for National Review.

Mr. Evans graduated from Yale University in 1955 as an English major. He then attended New York University where he did graduate work in economics. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and holds an honorary doctor of laws degree from Syracuse University.

From 1971 until the present, Mr. Evans has done a twice-weekly commentary for the CBS radio network, "Spectrum." Recently he was a party to a successful lawsuit challenging the requirement of compulsory union membership as a prerequisite to working in the broadcast field.

From 1971 to 1977, Mr. Evans served as chairman of the American Conservative Union and is now Director of the National Journalism Center in Washington, D.C.

“Journalism in a Free Society”

"Socialism—no private property, no free exchange, no profit and loss system—gains because there is so little persuasive opposition to it. Millions who temperamentally lean away from socialism as a theory fail to stand consistently against it in practice. They are for free enterprise, but! Not understanding, or living by, or being able to explain the principles of the market, they limit themselves to sputtering and fuming against the effects of socialism and, thus, attract no one away from socialism and toward freedom. Such conduct deafens ears and closes eyes to their ministrations; socialism grows by default! . . .

"Let each individual who would effectively combat socialism become an accomplished thinker, talker, even writer, of the freedom philosophy himself. The role of FEE's staff is to aid those who are looking to their own improvement, that is, to do the research, to develop the rationale, to select and publish the finest material on freedom that can be found, to lecture and conduct seminars, and to make these aids available to anyone who expresses a desire to cope with the socialistic menace. . . .

"The Foundation is an institution dedicated to explaining the basic principles which underlie willing as opposed to unwilling exchange, to the proposition that individual choice, expressed in a free market, is essential to liberty and is the source of economic progress. Explaining the nature, the function, and the manner in which government should be limited is a necessary preface to understanding freedom of choice and, therefore, is a primary Foundation purpose."

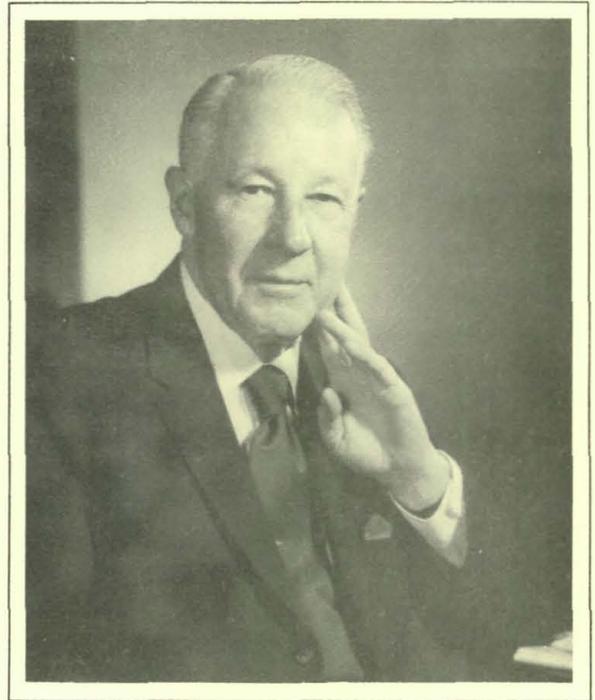

LEONARD READ was born on a farm in Michigan. Having the background of a 102-hour work week from 11 to 18, he maintains that "economic progress, not law, has lessened child labor."

At 19, his formal education was interrupted when he joined the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps. Following his service in England, France, and Germany during World War I, he sold insurance, worked as a cashier, then opened his own wholesale produce business. In 1927 he began a career in chamber of commerce work as secretary of a small organization. He then served for ten years as manager of the National Chamber's Western Division and, in 1939, became the General Manager of the Los Angeles Chamber, the largest of them all. In 1945 he was named Executive Vice-president of the National Industrial Conference Board. He left the NICB in 1946 to organize and to become President of the Foundation for Economic Education.

Leonard Read is one of the founders of the Mont Pelerin Society. As a spokesman of the freedom philosophy, he has lectured widely throughout this country and abroad.

Besides numerous magazine articles in The Freeman and elsewhere in the American and foreign press, his works include the books listed on the back page.
