Dear Dr. Sennholz!

Thank you for your INTRODUCTION to the Russian translation of LIBERALISM by Ludwig von Mises. Now I am translating it into Russian and I have a real pleasure feeling the depth and importance of the ideas that you expressed there. You managed to stress the linkage between classical liberalism and the current reforming in Russia brightly. The translation of the book itself is over and now it is under scientific editing before printing. I shall try to send you the copy of it when it is ready.

I have received the books sent to me from the FEE and now I am thinking on my future work in this direction. According to your advice I am going to proceed with translating ECONOMICS IN ONE LESSON by Henry Hazlitt if I manage the fundraising and copyright problem. I would like to keep in touch with you and to have your opinion on my efforts in future too.

Probably there can be some other possibilities of our cooperation in the sphere of educational activities. Now I am heading the Economic Program in the new-founded independent Foundation for Educational Initiatives in Russia. This body is supposed to undertake different activities in the field of economic education, forming free-market mentality in Russia among children and adults. We are going to start with publishing books and then extend our work to training students, conducting seminars, organizing informational exchange etc.

Looking forward for any news from you.

Sincerely yours,

Julia Kochetygova
