Dear Editor:

Henry Hazlitt has repeatedly shown daring courage in his columns week after week. It is such analysis, without the sensationalism of Winshells and the rabble-rousings of Peglers which makes his comments (though they oppose everything I hold to be good) a needed vitalization for a reading public too often subjected to the torture and rigmaroll of loudmouths.

Secondly he holds the great honor of crystallizing issues at a time of so much political obscurity and fence-sitting.

Yours truly,
