Mr. Ronald Reagan

Pacific Palisades, California

Dear Ronald Reagan:

Numerous persons have sent us a copy of the address you made before the National Association of Purchasing Agents at the Biltmore Hotel last May. The reason for this is that the thoughts you expressed are strikingly consistent with what we are up to here at FEE.

One of my associates wrote you but he merely addressed you at Hollywood and I suspect that's a letter you will not receive. Nonetheless, it is possible that this letter of mine might be a duplicate.

In order that you may be better aware of our efforts, I am appending a brief resume of our activities, a report recently prepared for some of our contributors. Enclosed is the current issue of our monthly journal, The Freeman. By all means, take a look at the lead article, "How to Win a War."

You and I must have many mutual friends at GE. We saw each other at the Edison Electric Institute in Chicago several years ago. You emceed an evening meeting of entertainment in some auditorium and I was one of the speakers during the day.

If you would like to receive our publications as released, you need only say the word. I would consider it a privilege to send everything to you.

Always my best!

Sincerely,

Leonard E. Read
