Dear Enid:

There goes forward to you under separate cover a stainless steel baster mit needle.

When next you do a roast leg of lamb use this for administering the garlic: Thoroughly crush two or three cloves of garlic in about three tablespoons full of olive oil, strain and then draw the contents into the baster with needle attached. Insert the juice in seven or eight places about the lamb. The moment it is in the oven and the heat hits it, this will evenly permeate throughout the meat. You won't get a garlic flavored lamb but, rather, a different flavored lamb which you will very much like.

Now for one more recipe which is better than the leg of lamb itself: Cut the leftovers into cubes about the size of a thumbnail. Put into an open casserole and add a small onion cut up. Then cut into equal size cubes a quantity of peeled raw potato equal to the amount of meat or even twice as much. Pat all of this down with a hand until it is eventually flat on top. Now take some chicken stock, thicken it slightly with corn starch, add perhaps a tablespoon full of soy sauce and three or four drops of Herb Saint or Pernod. Put into a 250 oven for about two hours. It is wonderful.

Again, thanks for all of your many courtesies.

Cordially,

Leonard E. Read

Dear Leonard:

Thanks for your letter of July 13.

Since writing you some articles in the ARCHITECTURAL FORUM of June, 1959 have come to my attention. One of the articles is entitled "Urban Renewal and the Ambivalent Businessman." I would infer from what I have seen that there are other articles in the same issue pertaining to the same subject.

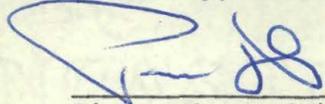

I am calling it to your attention for it strikes me that this is exactly the kind of thing you might want some member of your staff to do research on.

You already have done a good bit of research on the subject matter but this research would go to the question of whether or not quotations are out of context, whether the assumptions are true, and checking into the human beings involved and the fellow who is on the other side of the fence.

This article clearly is calculated to reach architects who invariably become involved in this problem. It seems to me it is also calculated, as it is now being used, to provide a means of reference.

I am sure that you are also aware that Mr. Luce (Hoffman, Kestnbaum, etc.) is the publisher of this publishing company.

Sincerely,

Pierre F. Goodrich

P. S. It looks even more certain at the moment that I will not be at the Mont Pelerin meeting. I am extremely uneasy about leaving here at this moment and it does take planning ahead.

I hope we have a good meeting in November and over enough days not to be crowded.

Dear Pierre:

In response to your letter of March 29, I have no acquaintance whatever with Mr. Francis W. Misch. I find that he is on FEE's mailing list but he is there by reason of the request being made by the Chrysler Corporation. Hutch, I am sure, will be able to give you all the information you want.

I have read with interest your correspondence with the Merchants National Bank & Trust Company and the paragraph about Keynes. While I agree with the statement that the Keynesian policy is now in practice, I am pained to see any important financial institution say such a thing as, "And it seems that any thought of change is unrealistic."

It is this type of thinking with which I try to deal in the little piece I have written for the May "Notes from FEE," copy appended. I have marked a few of the significant lines

All my best!

Leonard E. Read

Dear Leonard:

I have just written a letter to Hutchinson. I think it is all right for me to enclose a copy of it to you.

It occurred to me you might also know this man. I would like very much to know about him if you do.

When I see Hutchinson in May I will tell him why I asked but I preferred to get his reaction without telling him. It is pretty confidential anyway. So, in confidence, I will help you address yourself to it more particularly by telling you he might someday before long be considered as a possible trustee of Wabash College. In fact, I think it could very well come up soon.

Sincerely,

Pierre F. Goodrich
