Dear Dr. Kahn:

Your kind note of June 27th to the editors of NEWSWEEK arrived in my absence from the office. I appreciate very much your most generous reference to my work.

Sincerely,

HH/js

Newsweek Magazine

Dear Editors:

May I commend you for printing Mr. Henry Hazlitt's article (July 1) on inflation. Even though it was preceded by much useless debate and description of inflation in all its forms, Mr. Hazlitt's sane and concise article on the obvious causes of inflation caused me to rejoice and prevented me from canceling my trial subscription to your magazine.

I believe that if you printed more of the truth your articles would be more concise, clearer, easier read, better understood; particularly where the subject matter becomes highly sensational when a few facts are left out or delegated to an unimportant position.

I understand that you prints news. INFLATION is news. Yet...

Pardon me for rambling and I believe I caught myself in time, but may I again commend you for your courage in printing the above mentioned article.

Very truly yours,

(sgd.) Ernest J. Kahn

P. S. I cut out the article and I am saving it under my desk blotter. Here's hoping that I may add a few more of the same clear nature.
