Gentlemen:

From time to time in the past I have been obliged to express to you my keen appreciation of the brilliant articles by Messrs. Raymond Moley and Henry Hazlitt contributed regularly to NEWSWEEK. Once again I am constrained to write to you in felicitation of your good fortune in having on your staff of contributing editors those remarkably clear thinkers and vivid writers.

Specifically, today, I congratulate you on the publication in your issue of January 28, 1957, of Mr. Moley's "column" on "Where Money Isn't Tight", as incisive and devastating an article as I have read for some time in the serious and carefully factual press. That article should be required reading for every Senator and Representative on Capitol Hill, as well as for all members of the Cabinet and the President himself, - a well-meaning man sometimes confused by the clash of issues and interests. I wish that you would kindly thank Mr. Moley on my behalf for his crystal-clear exposition in "Where Money Isn't Tight" and express to him my ardent hope that its implications will not be lost in Washington - or elsewhere.

With every good wish for NEWSWEEK's continued success, I am,
Gentlemen,

Very truly yours,
Harris N. Cookingham
